Hi [Volunteer Services Lead],

I had a quick question about scheduling.

When I asked [Park Ranger 2] if I could work from 12-4, he said he wasn’t sure and that I should check with you. He also told me, twice, "not to get my hopes up." I want to clarify that I wasn't getting my hopes up - I wanted to know if we had the same flexibility here that I had at Tugman. They let us set our own hours for cleaning yurts and campsites - the deadline was 4.

Every park operates differently, so I was just trying to get clarity when asking but it sure seems like [Park Ranger 2] took it differently. Can you confirm if we have until 4 to finish our work? Or is there a required structure? Just want to make sure I’m aligned with what works best for the team.

Thanks,
Sam

Hey [Volunteer Services Lead],

After I asked [Park Ranger 2] about scheduling, the conversation spiraled into him repeatedly telling me that rangers are here to help and that if I can’t finish my work, I should ask them. He came back to that point several times over the next hour.

This is the pattern I'm talking about.

I asked a simple logistical question because I know from experience guests don't always leave until 1, and that if I start work at 11, I may be sitting around for two hours. I adapted my schedule at Tugman because of this. I just wanted to know if that same flexibility existed here in this environment.

I'm tired of feeling like I'm the problem because I can't get straightforward answers and then I have to email you about it because I need to get that straightforward answer from you. I am not the problem in this equation. I have had zero issues with guests and volunteers my entire time here. I had zero problems at Tugman. That says something.

Sam

And because I know this could set off a whole new round of unnecessary drama, I want to point out—this should have been avoided. I was proactive about this, even this morning, trying to ensure [Park Ranger 1] would be the one who trained me because I knew to expect this behavior from [Park Ranger 2]. I told you about it. I tried to avoid any written communication about it.

I'm not here trying to create problems. I asked a SIMPLE question and instead had someone try to manage non-existent emotions about logistics while repeatedly reminding me that "rangers are here to help."

This had nothing to do with rangers. It was a simple question. [Park Ranger 2] responds to me like this every single time I see him, and I tried to warn you.

I will not let you or anyone else make me the problem. I will protect myself. I see what's happening. You all keep trying to manage me like I'm a problem when all I really am is a mirror to the actual problem—the way you try to manage me.

You and I need to sit down and have a serious talk. I was serious about wanting to come back. But this dynamic needs to change. You and I are both reasonable people—we can make sure that it does.

Hi Sam,

We try to stick to our 11-3 shift for yurt and site maintenance for a few reasons, some people check out early and it gives you a chance to get started on cleaning even if it is before 1pm, we also have people that try to check in early to their sites before 4 pm and this is fine as long as the sites or yurts have been cleaned, and we also try to have everything done before it hits 4pm that way if there are any issues going on at the site we have time to try and prepare or contact incoming arrivals.
