The day after tomorrow is the anniversary of the coercive meeting [Park Manager] and [Park Supervisor] forced a gay volunteer to endure — because he sent an email to [Volunteer Services Lead] telling him he didn't trust him and why.

What that volunteer couldn't say at the time was that he sent that email to [Volunteer Services Lead] knowing it was really [Park Supervisor] orchestrating every act he had documented. He knew it then. He documented it then. He named it without naming it.

And [Park Supervisor] proved him right during that meeting.

The day after tomorrow is the anniversary of the most abusive act by state employees that volunteer has ever witnessed — directed at him, in public, by the people responsible for his safety and wellbeing as an unpaid worker on public land.

The day after tomorrow we will be examining it in detail. Timestamps. Exact quotes. Every abusive moment [Park Manager] and [Park Supervisor] produced in 62 minutes while believing there was no record of it.

There was.

There is.
