Lisa,
This is not a request. It is not a plea. It is not an opening for dialogue.

This is the close of record.

You closed communication in December.
I close documentation now.

What began as local abuse by two supervisors reached your desk with comprehensive evidence.
You had the authority to interrupt the pattern.
You refused.

That refusal transformed a containable failure into permanent institutional exposure.

Not because I made it so.
Because you chose to shield abuse over accountability.

You absorbed evidence into bureaucratic deflection.
You reframed documentation as "emotional processing."
You met truth with silence.

And in doing so, you demonstrated exactly what this institution does when confronted with documented abuse:
It protects the abusers. It dismisses the evidence. It erases the target.

I mapped that system.
I made it legible.
I made it permanent.

The archive exists now — not to change your mind, but to ensure the next person knows this pattern has institutional authorization at the director level.

Your silence isn't neutrality.

It's complicity made structural.

Every day you refuse accountability, the evidence speaks louder.

This is reputational collapse in slow motion.

What you refused to name has already named you.
