1/x: I said something dumb today. I was trying to make someone more comfortable around me by using the colorful language I imagine they do. I think it might be something humans do instinctively, because I wouldn't have said it if I had thought it through.

2/x: Most of us can sometimes say dumb things and it doesn't matter. But I'm in an active dispute with a state agency, and they have already shown a willingness to weaponize a vulnerability and characterize a person from the most mundane of moments.

x: So I need to own this one. It was a dumb joke and if it is ever used to define anything, that just shows how far they are willing to go to avoid accountability, because there is nothing in the past year and a half that justifies their treatment of me.

The remark was made to Deputy Evan Meyers, the next time I saw him after June 30. I documented it publicly the same day, before knowing what his office held. If it is ever used against me, it is proof Lane County took an active role in this retaliation.
