The Case, In Their Documents.

In early 2025, I served as an unpaid volunteer at Honeyman State Park. What happened over the next eighteen months is told here in order. Ten of the thirteen that follow are the state's own words.

This is not a story about me. It is a story about them — the choices they made when given evidence of abuse, when given the opportunity to stop, when given time to self-correct.

Every document and recording in these pages is preserved in full, independently addressable, at the archive above.

— Robert Samuel White

I saw the writing on the wall.

One month into my service at Honeyman, trust was already broken. I had an entire year of other parks lined up. I could not simply leave, and I could not trust them with the relationships ahead of me.

I wrote to the OPRD staff member responsible for the volunteers, named each failure, and committed to finishing my service professionally. I believed putting it on the record would protect my future at Oregon State Parks.

Everything that follows is what the State of Oregon did in response to an unpaid volunteer who kept a record.

“At every critical moment, you have failed to act with integrity.”

[Volunteer Services Lead],

I don't trust you, and that's because your actions have given me no reason to.

When I confided in you about the situation with [Park Supervisor], you escalated it instead of protecting me. Then you disappeared.

When I applied for a job here, you distanced yourself again. The moment I withdrew my application, you reappeared—spending ninety minutes talking about yourself.

When I finally opened up to you about why I'm here, what I sacrificed to be here, and why this matters to me, you responded by trying to manage my perception instead of actually listening.

And then? You distanced yourself again.

When I warned you—privately—to prevent a repeat of the [Park Supervisor] situation, you assured me [Park staff] would train me. That didn't happen.

At every critical moment, you have failed to act with integrity.

At every opportunity to lead, you have instead chosen avoidance.

I will continue to do my job professionally for the next month.

You will ensure that my contributions are recognized appropriately in your system.

I will not allow the dysfunction here to interfere with my larger trajectory.

If there is any pushback on this, understand that I am fully prepared for it.

They pressured me to leave.

Three days after my letter, the park manager and the park supervisor called me to a picnic table in the park's public day-use area. Two officials with authority over my housing and my placements, one unpaid volunteer with no protections, no notice of the subject, and no one at my side. I recorded all sixty-two minutes.

The park manager worked from a handwritten list. He presented minor interactions as a pattern of concerning behavior, claimed things were in my emails that were not there, and could not be specific when I asked. He told me to chew glass and swallow it. He admitted he had never given me the benefit of the doubt. And he repeatedly suggested I leave.

The park supervisor was silent for the first nineteen minutes. Her first word was “tone.” Fifty minutes in, she reached back to a text message we had already resolved, and confirmed on tape that the interpretation she brought to that table was one she had invented.

They sent someone to build a case against me.

The picnic table had not gotten them what they needed. I was still there, and sixty-two minutes of their own conduct now existed on tape. The program manager's answer to that tape was a rule: no recording without notification.

Thirteen days later, with every ranger away at meetings, a man with no uniform, no name, and no identification walked up to the yurts I was cleaning and photographed them. Then the questions: how did I like the park, and how was I being treated here.

I reported him the same day. Within two hours the park supervisor had a story. Two days later she repeated it, unprompted.

See the document in context: Evidence: Surveillance →

Then they dismissed me.

Four days after they sent the man with the camera, they used what they had built. The park manager called and dismissed me, six days before my term was due to end. They could not wait even six days.

Within the hour he was at my RV for the keys with twenty-four hours to vacate the site where I had lived and worked for nearly two months.

And they put nothing on paper. Nothing to sign, nothing to appeal, nothing that would ever have to be defended. His words, on tape: “just the conversation we had.”

Watch the recording: Evidence: Dismissal →

Then they dismissed the evidence.

Less than a day later, the program manager called from Salem. I told her I was still processing what had just happened and needed more time. She said okay, and in the next breath: “That dismissal is still moving forward.”

Then she worked through the file they had built. Unnamed sources. A found journal. Conversations I never had, including words I never said. I answered every item with specifics, and every answer was filed as “perspective.”

She closed by promising a process, with a determination about my year of placements by Friday.

Watch the recording: Evidence: Expulsion →

They put the retaliation in writing.

The determination took one day. On department letterhead, over the program manager's signature: dismissed from volunteer service statewide. The year of placements ahead of me, gone in a paragraph.

The grounds were stated in writing: the public comments made about staff. They named the speech itself as the offense, signed it, and mailed it.

"...the public comments made about staff regarding your volunteer service, were not in line with expectations set forth in the agreement."

The director responds to an open letter.

Five months later, I sent the Director of the agency an open letter documenting everything above. Her answer arrived within a day.

It thanked me for my service, said my voice mattered, and declined to respond to a single specific claim. No investigation followed.

“While I cannot respond here to the specific claims you have outlined, I want to assure you that I take concerns about our volunteer program seriously.”

See the document in context: Evidence: Containment →

Then the director dismisses the matter.

What followed was mostly silence. My public records request sat unanswered for ninety days, drawing a formal notice and a complaint to the Governor. In December I wrote the Director directly. Her answer came the next morning: the documented record answered in therapeutic language, and the channel closed.

“I can see that this has been deeply painful for you... I hear the frustration and hurt in your words. ...we’ve reached a point where I don’t believe further correspondence will lead to the resolution you’re seeking.”

See the document in context: Evidence: Containment →

The deputy director tries to isolate me.

In January, I sent the agency formal notice of First Amendment retaliation: dismissal and statewide exclusion for protected speech. Three weeks later the Deputy Director answered without addressing a word of it. He instructed me to stop writing to agency staff. I refused the same day. No official has authority over what a citizen may say to his own government.

“Please do not communicate further with [Program Manager] or other OPRD staff, and please do not expect any responses from them.”

The police show up at my door.

Exactly one year after the dismissal, police came through a locked gate posted against public access, onto the federal land where I live and work as caretaker, and knocked on my door. Three officers, no agency identified, concerned about what I was posting online.

I declined to speak without an attorney and closed my door. I recorded them leaving.

The state's record blames the forest service.

I pursued the record of that visit. The state police answered first that a search identified no records. Ten days later, a record existed, behind a fee. Three months after that, they released it in full.

Officer-initiated. No call type. Priority low. No action taken. Unit type: Criminal. My date of birth, entered ten days before I gave it to them. And the comment field claims who the visit was for.

The forest service demonstrates accountability.

The state record said the visit was for the Forest Service, the federal agency whose land I live on and care for. They are not a party to any of this. I asked them directly, in writing. The district ranger's answer:

"...the Forest Service did not initiate the interview. The agency's involvement was limited to assisting OSP by providing access..."

Mr. White-

I am glad that you were able to get the documents you request from the Oregon State Patrol. Regarding the CAD entry stating, "FOR THE FOREST SERVICE," I am unsure why that wording appears, as the Forest Service did not initiate the interview. The agency's involvement was limited to assisting OSP by providing access and guiding them to the Siltcoos Work Center. This is standard practice, as OSP does not have keys to Forest Service gates, work centers, or other secured facilities. Our law enforcement officer accompanied them solely to facilitate entry and ensure they reached the correct location. I hope this clarifies any confusion about the Forest Service's role. Employees in the Reedsport Office have shared positive feedback regarding your work as a volunteer, and I am pleased to hear that. I trust your experience with District staff has been positive, and I look forward to continuing a strong and productive working relationship.

The state police continue to block the record.

So I kept asking the state police: for the video, the reports, the communications around the visit. In August they answered. Six categories of records exist, including body camera video of the encounter. The video is withheld.

“Body Cam Video – Body Cam video will be withheld pursuant to ORS 192.345(40).”

REF#: PR27478
RE: PUBLIC RECORDS REQUEST REGARDING "ROBERT SAMUEL WHITE"

Robert White,

This is in response to the above referenced request, which Oregon State Police received on April 3, 2026. The Department is in possession of the following records which have been identified as responsive to this request:

- OSP Incident Reports and Attachments
- CAD
- Officer Notes
- OSP Dispatch Records
- Electronic Communications
- Body Cam Video – Body Cam video will be withheld pursuant to ORS 192.345(40).

ORS 192.345(40) - Exempts audio or video recordings resulting from a law enforcement officer's operation of a video camera worn upon the officer's person that records the officer's interactions with members of the public while the officer is on duty.

ORS 192.324(4) allows a public body to "establish fees reasonably calculated to reimburse the public body for the public body's actual cost of making public records available". We will require an estimated processing fee to be paid prior to processing. The estimate is shown below. If this estimate is too high the difference will be refunded. If we find processing will exceed this estimate additional payment will be required and we will contact you. At least 30 minutes of processing time has been waived. It may be found that exemptions apply which could result in records being withheld or redacted. In order to determine the extent to which such exemptions apply we must locate and review the records.

Staff Time: $157.50 (5.5 hours @ $25.00 and .5 hours @ $40.00 per hour to locate, compile, review, redact, copy and prepare materials for mailing as needed)

TOTAL DUE: $157.50

For volunteers

If this happened to you, it has a name. If you volunteer for a public agency, document what happens to you, and do it with integrity, and you will already be on the right side of any action they take against you.
